Praises Superior Students

Members of the National Honor Society's DHS chapter receive recognition in the PIONEER and are formally inducted at the Annual Honor Assembly, yet few students are aware of the nature of the club. Never-the-less it has existed at Dearborn High since 1928.

Students are selected for membership by the faculty based on scholarship, leadership, character, and service. Each teacher rates numerically on a one to four scale those students he had contact with through extra-curricular or class participation.

To qualify, a student must have earned a minimum grade average of 3.00 and must be rated by at least ten teachers. The average of these points determines his position in respect to other eligible students.

The number of students chosen is limited to five per cent of the 11A class and a total of 15 per cent of the graduating class.

Last year, officers were chosen to organize meetings for the planning of volunteer projects, conduct the formal initiation of members, and to choose, from among its constituents, applicants for the scholarships offered by the National Honor Society. As it is a national organization, each chapter is allowed to present two students for consideration.

Despite the formal structure of the organization, membership is considered more of an award meant to honor superior students than a commitment to perform services within the school as is required by other clubs. However, members have acted as guides at Open House.

New officers have not been elected this year to replace the four who graduated last year and no service projects have yet been planned.
